1. Round 1

1.1. Reviewer 1

Reviewer:

"Neglect and negligence in this matter can lead to severe consequences in their lives." - Please provide specific examples or studies that highlight the severe consequences of neglect and negligence in parenting. This will strengthen the argument and provide concrete evidence.

"The criteria for parents' inclusion were as follows..." - Elaborate on the rationale behind choosing these specific inclusion criteria. How do they contribute to the validity and reliability of the study?

"Semi-Structured Interview" - The interview process description is thorough; however, it would be helpful to include an appendix with the actual interview questions or a sample of them. This transparency will allow for better replication and validation of the study.

Ensure that all terms in the table (e.g., "Family economy," "Family rights") are clearly defined in the text. Readers unfamiliar with the specific terms might find it challenging to understand without explicit definitions.

"The findings indicate that contextual, intervening, causal conditions, outcomes, and strategies are factors that influence local successful parenting." - This summary is broad; consider providing more specific examples from the study to illustrate these points.

"It shows that anxiety disorders, depression, suicidal tendencies, stress, and other harms are significantly related to parenting styles." - Expand on how these relationships were determined. Were there specific parenting behaviors that were found to be most detrimental or beneficial?

"In the authoritative style, parents emphasize children's autonomy, know what their children are doing, and adjust their demands according to different situations, giving children independence and freedom." - This explanation can be enhanced by including specific behavioral examples or scenarios illustrating these parenting styles in action.

1.2. Reviewer 2

Reviewer:

"Moreover, research has shown that the mother-child relationship is associated with many psychological issues in children, including depression (), anxiety (), and adaptive problems ()" - Ensure all references are complete and correctly formatted. Missing citations need to be addressed.

"Parenting styles are fundamental components in the development and upbringing of children..." - Consider expanding on how each parenting style specifically influences different aspects of child development (cognitive, emotional, social). Adding recent studies or meta-analyses would be beneficial.

"It is necessary to educate them about income and family expenses..." - This section would benefit from a more detailed explanation of how economic education specifically impacts parenting success. Include specific mechanisms or examples.

"A parent must accept their child in all aspects to succeed in raising them and this is very important." - Provide a deeper analysis or theoretical framework supporting the importance of acceptance in successful parenting. Refer to relevant psychological theories or models.

"Education is important. Attending classes and workshops related to child-rearing helps me a lot." - Consider discussing the specific types of educational programs or workshops that are most effective and why. Provide evidence from existing research.

"Shared Family Activities" - Discuss the potential long-term benefits of shared family activities on children's development. Include specific research findings that support these benefits.

"Acceptance versus rejection refers to the level of attention and affection parents show their children." - Discuss how these dimensions can be measured or observed in practical settings. Include any tools or methodologies used in the field.

"Duncan et al. (2007) suggested seven roles for parents two of which—being an emotional source and an economic source—align with the factors of love and intimacy in relationships with children and family economy." - Provide a brief overview of the other five roles mentioned by Duncan et al. and how they relate to your findings.
