1. Round 1

1.1. Reviewer 1

Reviewer:

While the article provides a broad overview of advancements in developmental psychology, it lacks specific examples or detailed discussions of methodologies and findings. Future revisions could benefit from including concrete examples of research studies that illustrate the discussed advancements.

The article references several key studies and perspectives but does not engage deeply with the literature. A more thorough review, including critical analysis of cited works and how they contribute to the field's evolution, would strengthen the article.

The article briefly mentions the potential of interdisciplinary research for solving complex psychological challenges but does not delve into the implications of recent advancements for practice and policy. Expanding on this could make the article more impactful.

Response: Revised and uploaded the manuscript.

Reviewer:

The transition between topics (integration of disciplines, emphasis on diversity, and the role of interdisciplinary research) could be smoother. The argument would benefit from a clearer structure that guides the reader through the discussion more seamlessly.

Given the focus on evolving methodologies, the article could provide more insight into specific methodological innovations and how they have been applied in recent research. Discussing the implications of these methodologies for future research would also be valuable.

Response: Revised and uploaded the manuscript.
